

Miss Taylor DeLoach

Miss Taylor DeLoach is the National Advisor of Mental Health Awareness for The National Engineering League® and currently working professionally as an Operations & Risk Analyst with Synergy Technical. DeLoach is originally from Savannah, Georgia where she simultaneously excelled in academics and athletics which provided her with a full scholarship to The Ohio State University. In 2021, Taylor graduated with a degree in Consumer Family Finances and a Minor in Media & Society. As a former student-athlete, Taylor endured the mental health challenges that a Division 1 Athlete experiences while trying to maintain excellence in his or her academic, athletic, and personal life. She has since been involved in making more people aware of the related issues and encouraging professionals and athletes to build their characters outside of sports and their professions. Taylor encourages all to discover who they truly are on the inside and to not be defined only by a profession. In her free time, Taylor enjoys showing her creativity by creating outfits and modeling for different black-owned brands in the state of Georgia and Ohio.